HANGING up

Time to call it a day, boys. Actor Zach Galifianakis promises that this is the final "Hangover." Mucho machismo. It's not just the boys putting up their fists in the latest of the "Fast & Furious" franchise. Plus. We didn't think "Epic" was very epic.

Ex-Chickie's manager files whistleblower suit

The dish. A former Chickie's & Pete's manager files a federal lawsuit against the chain.

The former manager of a South Jersey Chickie's & Pete's sports bar filed a federal whistleblower lawsuit against the restaurant chain and its owner Peter Ciarrocchi last week, according to court documents.

Sharon Chase, 45, who managed the Egg Harbor, N.J., location, claims she was fired months after she raised concerns to federal officials about the chain's payroll practices, documents show.

Before Chase was fired, however, she was accused of undercharging for private parties, according to the lawsuit. Chase disputes the allegations.

The restaurant has denied any wrongdoing.

Chase, who started as manager in February 2010, was fired on Jan. 11, 2013.

Dozens of former and current employees have filed federal unfair labor practice lawsuits against the bar, claiming staff's tips were skimmed, among other unfair labor practice allegations.

Since the allegations came to light, the chain has incorporated new payroll policies for all employees.

Chickie's & Pete's, headquartered in Philadelphia, has 10 locations, and several kiosks in sports and amusement parks.

Facts

- Chase was a server from August 2009 to January 2010. She was a manager from February 2010 to January 2013.
- According to the suit, Chase never had any disciplinary action or warnings made against her.

Loot. Police seek two who stole gun, more from grocery store

Police identified one of two suspects in a May 3 West Oak Lane grocery store burglary.

Richard Johnson and another man allegedly stole a 9 mm handgun, a laptop, an iPod Touch, two cartons of cigarettes and $200 in cash from Sam's Grocery Store on 7100 Louise Street.

Police are looking for Johnson, whose last known address is Wyncote Avenue in West Oak Lane. He's described as black and 43 years old with a beard and mustache.

The second suspect is described by police as a black male 40 to 50 years old, maybe with a fisherman's hat. METRO

Home. Missing Collegeville student found in NC alive

Matthew Royer was found alive in North Carolina.

Royer, the Collegeville, Pa., native who never made it back to Montgomery County after he left the University of Rhode Island for summer break on May 16, was found Thursday unharmed, state police said.

Where the 21-year-old student had been or was found was not disclosed. The family requested privacy.

On Monday, Royer's mother Janet made a tearful public plea for her son's return after state police said they believed the student willingly went missing. METRO

City Council drinks in suggestions for new tax on alcohol

Discussion begins. Nutter's tax bills, intended to fund the school district, were introduced to the City Council on Thursday.

Mayor Michael Nutter's proposed cigarette and liquor-by-the-drink tax bills were introduced in City Council Thursday, and were met with some ideas from members.

City Council President Darrell Clarke edited the cigarette tax so all the revenue would be used to fund the school district. Nutter's original bill directed a portion of the money to help fund a health department's anti-smoking program.

Nutter's proposal includes a $2 tax hike on cigarettes and an increase on the liquor-by-the-drink tax from 10 percent to 15 percent. Along with plans for improved tax collections, the city expects to raise an estimated $95 million for the school district, which faces a $300 million deficit.

Clarke said state lawmakers must first approve the bills before City Council can vote on them.

At last week's City Council meeting, Councilman Bill Green said Nutter's tax plan will not make it past the state house.

"While I support the mayor's revenue proposals for schools, they are unlikely to pass the General Assembly, and frankly, missed the point," Green added. "Even if they do, there is no more help coming from the general assembly so there will be a $200 million gap."

The deadline for City Council to approve the city's budget is June 30.

Infant, man hurt after collision with SEPTA bus

An infant suffered a head injury and a 25-year-old man suffered a back injury Thursday after the SEPTA bus they were riding on was involved in a car accident, officials said.

A car crashed into the back of a Route 53 bus around 1:45 p.m. Thursday afternoon on the 4800 block of Wayne Avenue in Germantown.

The car erupted into fire after striking the bus, but the extent of the blaze was not known, SEPTA spokesman Andrew Busch said.

The 6-month-old baby suffered a "bump to the head" and the man suffered a "minor back injury" and were taken to Einstein Medical Center for treatment. METRO

Heckled. Protester interrupts Obama's foreign policy speech

Long-time activist Medea Benjamin was at the center of attention yesterday after she repeatedly interrupted President Obama as he spoke about the U.S. drone policy and Guantanamo Bay.

After several loud outbursts from Benajmin, Obama said, "Part of free speech is you being able to speak, but also me being able to speak. And you listening."

Benjamin, a longtime protester and founder of the social justice movement Code Pink, was removed by security

"It's really scary," Benjamin told Metro of yelling at the president.

"I was listening intently and was more and more disappointed as I heard him talk about drones and not using his power to say they will take them out of the CIA. And then Guantanamo Bay — he is commander in chief! He could close it today." Benjamin also took the opportunity to call on Obama to release Shaker Aamer, a Saudi Arabian citizen who has been held at Gitmo since 2002 but has not been charged.

"There are 102 men in Guantanamo Bay who are starving themselves, 30 being brutally force fed," Benjamin said. "They need justice." CASSANDRA GARRISON

Quoted

"I appreciate that we have the ability to speak out, but more important to me is to have policies that coincide with the Geneva Convention and international law." Benjamin

BEATING THE ODDS ON THINGS THAT KILL YOU

I'm an optimistic guy. I don't spend my days fretting about choking on fish bones, being brained by falling masonry or being waylaid by gravediggers. This year's drumbeat of calamities, however, has made me a little twitchy about the dangers of terrorism, malfeasance, cruelty, carelessness and natural disasters.

But as I pondered a chart from the National Safety Council this week on how the lives of Americans end, I was struck by the fact that most of us spend far too much time fearing the wrong things.

For example, the No. 1 killer stalking all of us is … well, ourselves. One in 6 will be taken by heart disease, 1 in 7 will go to cancer and 1 in 29 will fall to strokes. Cars, as we all learned in Driver's Ed or in the "Fast and Furious" movies, are constant threats. One in 98 of us will die on highways. Suicides, accidental poisonings, slips and trips all crowd the top of the list of potential killers.

Quoted

" … as I pondered a chart from the National Safety Council this week on how the lives of Americans end, I was struck by the fact that most of us spend far too much time fearing the wrong things."

Then the numbers get goofy. Your odds of dying from overheating are twice as high as your odds of being taken in a terrible storm. You're more likely to be killed by hornets than by an earthquake. And your neighbor's dog has a better chance of putting you into a grave than does the next big flood.

Obviously, if you're a roofer with a drinking problem or a drug dealer with a quick trigger finger, your statistical horizon may tilt a bit against you. So circumstances matter, but I still think perspective matters more. My point: All the bad news lately has made the world seem like a very frightening place, but most of us should spend more time worrying about our general health and welfare. A long, healthy life will depend more on that than on some exotic threat that the odds say will probably never come your way.

Father of man shot by FBI believes son was tortured

The father of a Chechen immigrant killed during questioning over his links with one of the Boston Marathon bombings suspects said on Thursday he plans to travel to the United States where he suspects his son was tortured and killed.

Ibragim Todashev, 27, was killed by a federal agent in his apartment complex when he became violent during questioning over his ties to Tamerlan Tsarnaev, the older of two brothers suspected of planting two bombs at the marathon.

"I suspect that they tortured my son and that he suffered a painful death," said Abdulbaki Todashev, wiping away tears at the home he shares with one of his wives in Chechnya. REUTERS

Todashev traveled to the United States in 2008 on a Russian passport, a federal law enforcement source said, and lived in Boston before moving to Florida, where he was killed. His father said he had a plane ticket to return to Russia on Friday.

UK arrests two more in London attack on soldier

Murder in broad daylight. Officials say the suspects in the brutal slaying of a soldier on a busy street were known to security forces.

British police arrested two more people on Thursday in a hunt for accomplices of two British men of Nigerian descent accused of hacking a soldier to death on a London street in revenge for wars in Muslim countries.

The two suspected killers, now under guard in hospitals, had been known to security services before Wednesday's daylight attack, security sources said.

Another man and a woman, both aged 29, were detained on suspicion of conspiracy to murder.

One of the assailants, filmed calmly justifying the killing as he stood by the body holding a knife and meat cleaver in bloodied hands, was named by acquaintances as 28-year-old Londoner Michael Adebolajo — a British-born convert to Islam.

So frenzied was the attack, some witnesses thought they were trying to behead and disembowel the victim, who was named as a 25-year-old Afghan war veteran working as an army recruiter.

The attack, just a month after the Boston Marathon bombings and the first Islamist killing in Britain since local suicide bombers killed 52 people in London in 2005, revived fears of "lone wolves" who may have had no direct contact with al Qaeda. REUTERS

London killing

'I know the killer'

Anjem Choudary / GETTY IMAGES

The suspected killer of a British soldier on Wednesday has been identified as Michael Adebolajo, and is known to fringe Islamic groups in London.

"I know him as Mujahid, he attended our activities for five years from 2005," preacher Anjem Choudary, former leader of the banned organization Al Muhajiroun, told Metro. "He was very quiet and practiced nonviolent Islam, I can't imagine what happened to him after leaving us."

Choudary, who has attempted to create Sharia-law zones in London, condemned the killing but described it as a "wake-up call" over British foreign policy in the Muslim world. "It would be foolish to ignore this. Young people may see it as an inspiration."

Mainstream Muslim groups have made public statements against the killer, but the Muslim Public Affairs Committee demanded they go further in tackling radicals. "We need to teach angry young men to express their views within the political process. Instead of talking about theology, we need to teach them to be citizens," said spokesman Tahir Shah. "Most institutions are failing to connect with youth." KIERON MONKS

Going serious

"It's a comedy, and Alejandro hasn't made one. He's a great filmmaker, obviously. The little I can tell you about is you kind of know you're in the hands of a really experienced technician and great filmmaker. It's been a really great work experience for me. I'm there with really serious actors who've done really accomplished work. I think I'm the only one in the cast who's never won a trophy — and it will probably stay that way for my whole career. But it's nice to be mixed up with these serious actors doing a comedy."

Galifianakis, on filming "Birdman," a comedy from Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu, who's known for heavier films, like "Babel."

ZACH GALIFIANAKIS

The "Hangover" star promises this is the final installment. No, seriously.

'I THINK IT'S KIND OF OPEN-ENDED, BUT AT LEAST [ALAN] SEEMS LIKE HE'S ON THE RIGHT PATH'

What's one more trip to Las Vegas between friends? "The Hangover Part III" finds Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and loose cannon Alan (Zach Galifianakis) teaming up for one last road trip gone wrong. Only this time, Galifianakis' Alan goes from comic relief to main character, which is a particularly risky proposition — at least according to Galifianakis.

Alan really takes center stage in this installment.
Yeah, as disheartening as that is. [Laughs] No, I mean we'll see if the audience thinks that an Alan storyline is sustainable for a movie — I mean a lot of Alan. There's a lot of Alan in this. I was excited because we got to explore Alan a little bit rather than have him be just a one-dimensional character that's kind of weird and saying random things. In this third installment I think there's a little bit more of an emotional arc with him, which I appreciate. It's more of a story than just jokes with Alan this time. I don't know at the end of this where Alan goes. I think it's kind of open-ended, but at least he seems like he's on the right path.

I was going to ask where you see him five years from now.
Running the Tea Party. [Laughs] No, that's just a good-natured joke. I don't know where Alan would be. Hopefully he's married, and he probably drives by Phil's house a lot and honks to see if Phil will come out, and then Phil maybe looks through his blinds to see who it is, if it's Alan outside. Every other Thursday Phil will come out and say hi to him.

They've been billing this as the final installment. Why is the trilogy the standard for film series?
Well, part of it is overstaying your welcome, I think. After the first one I was fine with just leaving well enough alone, to be honest. But then it was so fun to do the movies, and I thought there was more to explore, ultimately. I've never really thought about the trilogy thing. The good thing about the third one is it allows kind of a nice goodbye. With the second one there's no closure, really. There was an event, they'll go on with their lives. This one seems like there's a little bit of closure.

Q&A

The "Hangover" films have been phenomenally successful. If this one follows suit, do you think you'll have to try to talk them out of making a fourth one?
Well, I think it's bad to do movies because of economic gain. As an entertainer or an actor, you want to try to do other things and challenge yourself to try other roles, and it's time to move on. I think everybody feels that, the director and the other actors — and not out of anything but love. There won't be a fourth.

Latest 'Fast & Furious' up to speed

Car movie. The sixth in the franchise is almost as transcendently dumb as the fifth.

Review

'Fast & Furious 6'

Director. Justin Lin

Stars. Vin Diesel, Paul Walker

Rating. PG-13

Whereas some sequels ("The Hangover Part II") repeat the original, and others ("The Hangover Part III") try something new, the "Fast & Furious" films are that other kind of franchise beast: a constantly reinventing shape-shifter. It can't even decide on a consistent title template. Don't confuse "Fast & Furious," the fourth entry, with "The Fast and the Furious," the first. (Only the "Rambo" titles are more confusing.) Over the six films, key actors have disappeared as their careers soared, only to return once their careers waned. The rest are expendable.

But the backbone is always the same. Supersized throwbacks to Roger Corman drive-in programmers from the '60s, they offer light melodrama meant to do no more than connect the sporadic, OTT set pieces. The series apex, called simply "Fast Five," featured cars somehow powerful enough to drag a bank vault across a bridge. "Fast & Furious 6" — only called "Furious 6" onscreen, amusingly — isn't as transcendently ridiculous. But it does have a tank.

If you must know, this one finds Vin Diesel and Paul Walker's speed demons/world-class thieves working out a deal with federal agent Dwayne Johnson — there chiefly to make Diesel look like DJ Qualls — to clear their tarnished names. There's a second group of speed demons/world-class thieves on the prowl, this one meaner than the Diesel-Walker crew. Their fearless leader (Luke Evans) spouts Nazi-like jargon about precision and not being afraid to cut off (or gorily gouge) a weak link. Evans' crew also includes Diesel's movie ex Michelle Rodriguez, presumed to have been murdered in No. 4. But she's back anyway, and with amnesia, as if this series didn't already play like a roided-up, adrenaline-junkie soap opera.

There are a couple of lines about Diesel and Walker getting older and needing to settle down, though their contracts will say otherwise. Like "Fast Five," this one's more of an ensemble piece anyway, with plenty of comic relief from Ludacris and Tyrese Gibson, and a delightful knock-down, drag-out girl fight between Rodriguez and special guest star Gina Carano, whose MMA stylings (previously seen in "Haywire") could use even more screentime. Director Justin Lin has been the franchise-runner since the third, "Tokyo Drift." Some sporadic overplotting suggests he's ready to move on. (Which he is; "Fast & Furious 7" will be handled by the guy who made "Saw," for some reason.) But Lin frequently remembers to pummel us with awesome nonsense, none more awesomely nonsensical than a climax set on a runway evidently longer than some countries.

Let's avoid adulthood

Indie comedy. Noah Baumbach's second film with Greta Gerwig shows 20-something restlessness.

Greta Gerwig and Mickey Summer play besties split apart by adulthood in Noah Baumbach's "Frances Ha." / PINE DISTRICT LLC

Review

'Frances Ha'

Director. Noah Baumbach

Stars. Greta Gerwig, Mickey Summer

Rating. R

"Bridesmaids" did not invent the type of film wherein a vocationally stunted woman loses her bestie to adulthood. But if that film were shot on a very small budget, filmed in black-and-white, bore influences from the French New Wave — and did not include any scenes in which someone poops in a busy street — it might nearly resemble Noah Baumbach's "Frances Ha." "Bridesmaids" also had a foundation in deep trauma, about the pain of being the last among your peers to settle down. "Frances Ha" goes deeper with this idea, and even features better jokes.

Greta Gerwig plays Frances, a 20-something in an unprofitable nonprofession (dancing), living in a bubble of comfortable security with roommate Sophie (Mickey Summer, Sting's wry daughter). Then Sophie simply and suddenly finds a man. With no one to lean on as a crutch, questionable living situations, ill-advised Paris trips (funded "with that credit card I got in the mail") and other, sometimes cruel humiliations follow.

What makes this tolerable, and even enjoyable, are Gerwig and Baumbach. Gerwig has a loopy, vaguely medicated charm where she blurts out embarrassing admissions, as though she wasn't even trying to stop them. Baumbach is a wit with a gift for sharp, self-aware one-liners. The dialogue leans more toward Gerwig, but the film has the tight shape of its director's films ("The Squid and the Whale"). Like its hero, it never succumbs to self-pity. Even when Frances hits a strange and kind of rock bottom, she's cautiously semi-optimistic, puttering along as though she was simply used to living terribly.

As a director, Baumbach's mood is even brighter. The pace is fast, made faster by giant ellipses in which major events are simply omitted. He even borrows, almost shamelessly, a scene from "Holy Motors" director Leos Carax's 1986 film "Mauvais Sang," where Denis Lavant sprinted as fast as he could down an empty city street at night to David Bowie's "Modern Love." Frances does the same thing, only the street is crowded, the daylight beaming, her mood even brighter. "Frances Ha" should be more depressing than it is. Luckily, it's usually the opposite.

A generic title, a generic movie

Animation fantasy. In "Epic," a tweener hangs with talking animals you've almost certainly seen before.

Aziz Ansari and Amanda Seyfried were turned into a cartoon slug and teen for "Epic."
BLUE SKY STUDIOS

A perpetual also-ran behind Pixar and DreamWorks Animation, Fox's Blue Sky Studios previously brought us "Rio" and the absurdly profitable "Ice Age" series. Blue Sky movies have a strictly good-enough-for-government-work feel. Popular without penetrating the zeitgeist, these are marginally adequate entertainments destined to be forgotten on the drive home from the movie theater.

Blue Sky's latest, the blandly titled "Epic," is more of the same. Inspired by William Joyce's "The Leaf Men and the Brave Good Bugs," it's an overcrowded hodgepodge of familiar tropes and Xeroxed bits from other, better movies. It's the kind of film that even while watching it for the first time you could swear you've seen it before.

Amanda Seyfried voices Mary Katherine, a tweener who's shrunk down and embroiled in a pint-sized war going on in the woods. There, the brave and noble Leaf Men (led by an uptight Colin Farrell) do daily battle with the sinister Boggans, gargoyle-like creatures who soar around on bats spreading rot and decay.

The rules of "Epic"'s universe are so needlessly over-complicated that the majority of the movie is just characters standing around explaining the story to one another. But if you've seen "Lord of the Rings," "Avatar" or even "Ferngully: The Last Rainforest," you'll already be way ahead of them. The nicest thing you can say is that at least the movie practices the green environmental message that it preaches: The entire screenplay is recycled.

Documentary. Ricky Jay's life story: A tale of magic and grifting

Review

'Deceptive Practice: The Mysteries and Mentors of Ricky Jay'

Directors. Molly Bernstein and Alan Edelstein

Rating. NR

Since the 1970s, Ricky Jay has been a staple of stage, TV and movies, where he's alternated between two personas: showboating magician and placidly smirking character actor for the likes of Paul Thomas Anderson and David Mamet. A great film about Jay would do as he does: try to hoodwink the audience via some elaborate and engaging ruse. But a good film will do. If anyone deserves a fawning Great Man doc, it's someone who has kept up practices that were dead long before he was even born, and done so with a presence both warm and worthy of suspicion.

As interviewee, Jay isn't exactly cagey, but he does only reveal what he seems to think may be interesting to a larger audience. (His late-bloomer marriage is kept for the final minutes.) The bulk of the film is TV clips, offered as giant, delightfully inelegant blocks. A regular for Dinah Shore and Merv Griffin, he's shown as a longhair on "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert," sharing an episode with Kansas and the Sex Pistols. Elsewhere he smoothly and satisfyingly tricks Steve Martin out of $51. The man himself remains elusive. But that's as it should be.

MATT PRIGGE

It's a movie about a store

Documentary. Bergdorf Goodman gets a mildly interesting film profile.

The New York giant Bergdorf Goodman gets its own doc.
ENTERTAINMENT ONE FILMS US

A glossy, 90-minute infomercial for Bergdorf Goodman — New York City's most luxurious store — this self-serving documentary will best be appreciated by fashionistas who strive and aspire to live the fantasy that the store inspires. Unfolding as a series of various chapters, "Scatter My Ashes at Bergdorf's" takes viewers behind the scenes of the exclusive store without revealing anything particularly special.

Viewers meet Linda Fargo, the store's fashion director, who counsels designers. She shows and tells how exclusive lines are bought and developed. In contrast, artists and decorators are seen busily developing the holiday display "Carnival of the Animals."

Review

'Scatter My Ashes at Bergdorf's'

Director. Matthew Miele

Genre. Documentary

Rating. PG-13

But even for those wowed by the store's celebrated windows, this running vignette grows tiresome and repetitive.

The film's best sequence showcases Betty, a personal shopper whose wry and honest approach to selling has become justifiably legendary. Viewers will crave her advice (and fashion sense), and admire her sharp tongue.

The store itself isn't showcased as well. Its history and the 16-room apartment perched on top of the building are discussed, albeit rather dryly. The famous shoe salon — aka every girl's dream — is shown, but what resonates is that they have trouble keeping a pair of $6,000 shoes in stock. Still, it's hard to develop a deep, emotional connection to this film, which makes viewers feel like window-shoppers once removed.

Moreover, no one in "Scatter My Ashes at Bergdorf's" has a bad thing to say about the store. This suggests that Bergdorf's is a magical place for its wealthy, discerning clientele — and the bag lady who once pulled out thousands of dollars to purchase a fur coat, much to the shock and delight of the associate trying to get her away from the high-priced merchandise.

MICHAEL DOUGLAS

The star talks about meeting Liberace, the man he plays in "Behind the Candelabra."

'HE WAS A CHARMING MAN'

Not long ago, it would have seemed unlikely that man's man Michael Douglas would play Liberace, the piano star who somehow tricked the world into thinking he was straight. Times have changed, though, and now Douglas is doing a movie in which he falls in love with Matt Damon, "Behind the Candelabra." In it, Douglas plays the entertainer in the latter part of his life. The film reunites him with his "Traffic" director, Steven Soderbergh.

What are your memories of Liberace?
I met him once, briefly, when I was 12. At the time, my father [Kirk Douglas] owned a house in Palm Springs, close to Lee [as Douglas calls Liberace]. One sunny day, this Rolls Royce stopped in front of the house and Lee stepped out. He was wearing lots of gold and the sunlight was reflecting off his jewelry. He was a sort of pre-Elton John. He invited that style. He was a charming man. He loved entertaining and beautiful things.

How did Soderbergh convince you to do the part?
In 2001, when we were filming "Traffic," Steven asked me, "Have you ever thought of doing something about Liberace?" I wondered how that character could possibly make him think of me. I was a bit paranoid at the time, so I tried to thank him and slip away! But then, years later, Steven came across this book, "Behind the Candelabra." This happened right after my cancer, and offering me this role was a great gift. I will be eternally grateful to Matt and Steven for waiting until I got better.

How did you identify with this role?
I normally play the bad or ambiguous guy. But once you start doing your research on Lee, you realize that he was a generous man. It's the first time that I play a famous character. I was a bit nervous at first because Lee was a strong Polish guy, much bigger and more built than me. So for me, it was all about getting his voice right. I watched documentaries and as I don't play the piano, I focused on mimicking his hand gestures.

Q&A

How did you get the physical look of Liberace?
When we first saw the masks, we were horrified! It was like we had just walked out of a plastic surgery! But it had to look as real as possible and so we spent a lot of time in the makeup chair. And before you know it, everything seems to come together. You put on the right outfit, have the right hairdo, and there you go.

Review

'Behind the Candelabra'

Director. Steven Soderbergh

Stars. Michael Douglas, Matt Damon

Premieres. Sunday, 9 p.m., HBO

"Behind the Candelabra" is not the first TV movie about flamboyant piano man Liberace and his secret, May-December relationship with his "chauffeur" Scott Thorson. In 1988, a year after Liberace's death from AIDS-related complications, dueling television films aired. Campfests, they reminded the people of that era of their lousy gaydar — that the mainstream had allowed a lifelong bachelor who rocked flowing robes and heavy rings to become the world's highest-paid entertainer. Steven Soderbergh's new film — his threatened last — isn't quite as crass.

Matt Damon plays Thorson, a strapping animal trainer with a Farah Fawcett flip 'do who meets Liberace (Michael Douglas) when he's 18. (Damon, incidentally, is 42.) The two wind up together for a decade, some of it warm and magical, much of it unpleasant and nightmarish.

Richard LaGravenese's script deserves a lot of credit for not shying away from gay content, which is one reason this is playing HBO, not the nation's multiplexes. It still follows a simple rise-and-fall trajectory, with the polite, vaguely stupid Thorson, eventually succumbing to "Boogie Nights"-style coke tirades. Soderbergh's cold and bemused tone gives it personality, and brings out some of the story's weirder ideas. The craziest tidbit is that the Liberace convinced Thorson to undergo plastic surgery to look more like him.

Predictably, Douglas walks off with the movie. But don't discount Damon. The real Thorson may have been dumb — he currently sits in jail for credit card fraud — but Damon's Thorson is thick without being an idiot, as though he was aware he was making bad decisions but not smart enough to think of a way out not involving drugs and tantrums.

Baroness: Take my bones away

Baroness is back with an older album and two new members. / DOUG SEYMOUR

Bus-bruised warriors. Singer John Baizley talks life and touring after tragedy.

Metalheads united in a rare moment of emotional synchronicity last summer, when Baroness suffered a terrible touring accident — a bus crash in England that left important bones shattered and important people sidelined.

This isn't that story. This is the story of the difficult aftermath. This is the story of how integrity trumps superficiality. At the time of the crash, the band was a critically acclaimed crossover act whose recently released album "Yellow & Green" had captivated audiences and critics with its powerful and somber melodic muscle.

"The predictability of the album cycle was wrenched away from us, so now the net of safety and predictability is a thing of the past," says Baroness nucleus John Baizley. "I think most people have made up their minds on whether they like the album at this point. And things have changed — in terms of lineup, in terms of perspective. This tour is in gratitude to our fans who continued to pay attention to us all while we were out of commission momentarily."

Baizley's run with Baroness has seen a number of lineup changes. With this tour, fans will see a completely new rhythm section as drummer Allen Blickle and bassist Matt Maggioni recover from the accident. "We've just lost two members, so 50 percent of our sound has changed. So in some ways , we've taken a very big step in a different direction, musically speaking. And I think the important thing is to embrace that. That's the new existence, and you work therein."

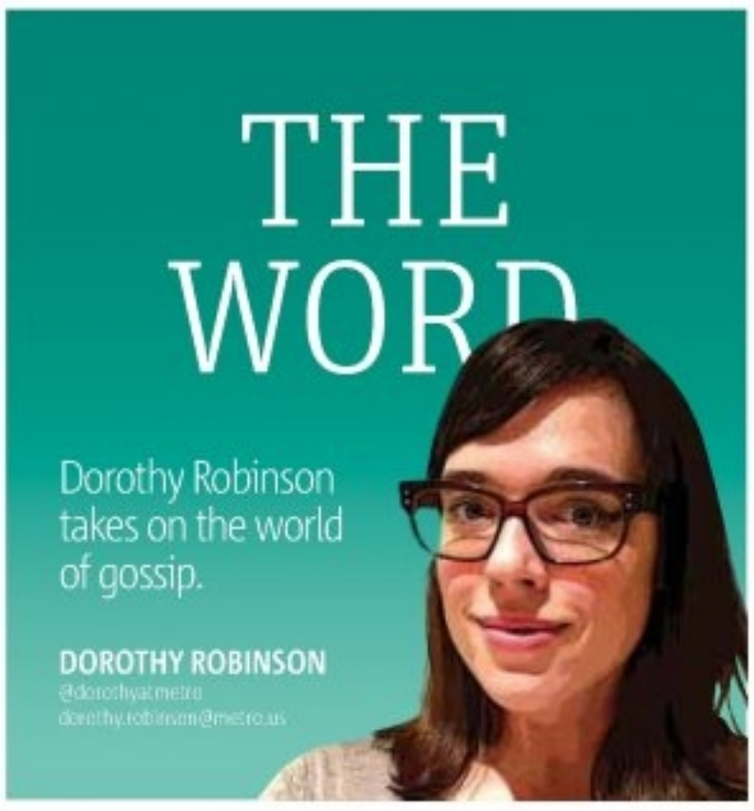
1 Julianne Moore on Hollywood's double standard

Julianne Moore, 52, is getting tired of the double standard for women when it comes to getting older in Hollywood. "Men aren't asked about age. Men aren't asked about their children," she tells DuJour magazine. "Not that these things aren't important, but I do feel like it becomes reductive when a woman's life becomes, 'Talk to me about your kids and how you feel about plastic surgery.'"

I get it, Julianne. I really do. But, like, I think even the most ardent feminists want to know how you look so good at 52 and have a stellar career and a family. It is scarily amazing.



Bynes not happy with In Touch

Amanda Bynes is not happy with how In Touch Weekly has been portraying her, and who can blame her when the cover story on her gets a "Destroyed by fame" headline? But that's not why Bynes is up in arms. The magazine apparently used "fake altered photos" with the story "because they f–ing hate me," Bynes explained on Twitter. (The magazine also claimed to have photos taken inside Bynes' New York City apartment.) "They used an old shot of me on the cover with a bad angle of my old nose before I had surgery to reshape my profile and to remove the webbing from my eyes," Bynes tweeted. "I have to sue because that's not my apartment, those aren't my clothes!"

She's in control: Janet Jackson is a billionaire

I've always been slightly fascinated by Janet Jackson. She is blessed with the family talent without, it seems, being too touched by that Jackson weirdness which so engulfed Michael and La Toya.

It took a while and a lot of ups and downs (one crazy nipple exposure and the tragic death of her bother among them) but now it appears the 46-year-old's longevity has paid off: After several decades in the entertainment industry, Jackson has reportedly hit billionaire status, according to Variety. Jackson's income has included $458 million for concert tours, $304 million for film and television work, $260 million from album sales, plus more than $81 million from sponsorship deals. With the new income milestone, Jackson joins an elite club that also includes her husband, Wissam Al Mana, who became a billionaire thanks to investments in the Middle East.

I think I speak for Jackson fans everywhere when I say: You go girl. You've had quite the ride and quite the family. Enjoy flying around in those gold-plated jet packs or whatever billionaires do with all of their money. You deserve it.

If you go

Double down

Can't decide between a burger or a dog? Have both. PYT in the Piazza is serving up a Wet Hot American Picnic Burger this weekend. It's a beef patty stuffed with a hot dog and American cheese, then piled high with Russian dressing, ketchup, mustard, onion, sweet pickle relish and potato chips. For the full backyard barbecue experience, dig into the sides: deviled egg potato salad and a slice of watermelon.

Head out to a cookout

This Memorial Day weekend, let someone else fire up the grill. Get out of the house and over to these shindigs instead of hiding out in your living room because you RSVP'ed "no" to your weirdo neighbor's barbecue.

JULIA WEST

1 Mayfair Block Party at Bainbridge Street Barrel House

Barrel House, a casual spot with elevated American cuisine on Bainbridge, is hosting its first Mayfair block party. It's a way of showing appreciation for the neighborhood that has embraced it in the few months that it's been open. For you, it's an opportunity to down some craft suds and $5 fare. Practice your throw, because there will be a dunk tank with proceeds going to Morris Animal Rescue.

Sunday
11 a.m.-8 p.m.

2 Roller Derby BBQ

Meet the baddies of Penn Jersey Roller Derby as they host one mean barbecue. First, though, is the free three-hour derby workshop with coach Skip Schoen. You don't have to be evil on wheels to show up and hang: The event is open to the public.

Sunday
workshop noon-3 p.m., barbecue to follow
1801 W. Indiana Ave.

3 Friday Nite Backyard Barbecue at Trestle Inn

We know that there are plenty of cookouts and block parties to choose from this weekend, so let us help make your decision easier: this barbecue includes go-go dancer Miss Scarlett Fever. Oh yeah, and there's a free whiskey sour in it for you (between 5-7 p.m.).

This is the debut of what will be a weekly party featuring a rotating lineup of dancers and food trucks. For the kickoff, it's Yumtown. That's the food truck — we already mentioned the dancer.

Friday
5-9 p.m.
339 N. 11th St.

4 Chaddsford Winery

If you're looking for something more mature and less noisy, but still outdoors, get out of Philadelphia. Well, for the weekend, at least. Take a trip to Chadds Ford, about 40 minutes from Center City, for the winery's Memorial Day weekend celebration, complete with live music, catered treats and frozen sangria slushies. Bring a blanket for a classy picnic.

Friday-Monday
Noon-6 p.m.

Bask in the 'zol'

Festival. Singer Prince Royce brings his signature sound to Penn's Landing.

Prince Royce is headlining the El Zol Fest. / JENNIFER NIEMAN

There isn't a language barrier when it comes to the music of Prince Royce.

The Latin music superstar rocked the crowd at Jay-Z's Made in America Festival last summer — even though he sang his set in Spanish.

"It was such a big experience seeing so many genres [of music] and ethnicities getting together as one," Royce says. "I was singing in Spanish, and the people were dancing. It was really nice."

Royce is a star in Latin America, but he's certainly made in America. He was born in the U.S. to Dominican parents and raised in the Bronx. His 2010 self-titled debut was a No. 1 smash on the Latin charts, and his singles routinely rack up more than 30 million views on YouTube.

"There are so many kids like me growing up and raised Latin who were born in the United States, from mixed cultures," Royce says. "I try to project that in my songs and my performances."

It's fitting that Royce is set to headline the El Zol Fest Saturday at Festival Pier at Penn's Landing. El Zol, broadcast on 1340 AM, strives to appeal to listeners who speak both Spanish and English.

The foundation of Royce's sound is bachata, the guitar-based music that originated in the countryside barrios of the Dominican Republic and has gone on to rival salsa and merengue music in much of Latin America. In the U.S., the music is still only regionally popular, but groups like Aventura have secured such a standing that they performed at the White House for President Obama in 2009.

Royce is making his music more mainstream by adding R&B accents and singing some songs in English, as he did with his bachata version of Ben E. King's classic "Stand By Me." He also has pan-American appeal as he uses diverse Latin influences, including the sounds of the Mexican ranchera, in his songs.

"I try to reach everybody in Latin culture," Royce says. "I try to add different sounds to cater to everybody and give everybody something to try to explore."

He's diving all the way into the English-speaking market in the next year or so with an English-language album from RCA.

"It's definitely a challenge for me. It's a whole new ballgame," Royce says. "Myself, I grew up listening to R&B, so we'll have pop, a little Spanish and a little bit of Latin rhythms, but most of it will be in English with a Latin flavor."

Meltkraft serves up creative comfort food

Hot chef. Rebecca Foxman is a grilled cheese expert.

If you've been to the Reading Terminal Market recently, chances are you've noticed Meltkraft, slinger of specialty grilled cheese sandwiches. Yes, that's the place that sells the version with brisket and mac 'n' cheese between the bread. Chef Rebecca Foxman is the one responsible for the recipes — everything from the crazy concoctions to the mellow flavor combos. We spoke with her about the shop, the market and where she finds comfort food.

You guys have been open since January. How's the first year going so far?

Great, better than expected! It's been a lot of fun getting to know the area and the crowd, the regulars. We've been accepted pretty quickly, and we're excited.

What's it like to have a spot in Reading Terminal Market compared to one that stands alone?

The traffic that comes through is extremely heavy at times. Having an open stand is different than a storefront and door. There are a lot of people walking by, and they can see everything that we sell, and I like that aspect.

Have you become buddies with the other business owners there?

Oh yeah. Everyone here helps each other. If we run out of something or we need some last-minute produce, there's a place to get it. And we'll return the favor and help restaurants in the building. The Amish and Mennonite communities are wonderful, too.

What is your most popular menu item?

The Valley Thunder grilled cheese. By far, that one sells the most.

Grilled cheese is a great comfort food. Where do you go in Philly when you're craving comfort?

I'm a huge fan of authentic Asian food. I go to Rangoon a lot, and I enjoy Banana Leaf. I like Jewish concept food a lot, too. I love things that are spicy, heavy and fishy. For drinks I like the bloody mary at Oyster House. Or I'll go to Monk's or Percy Street Barbecue for beer — they have an unbelievable can beer list. But really, I just love a good bloody mary.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. To appease someone special, you might have to make a painful concession. The choice will be worth it in the long run.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. It might be difficult to distinguish between business and productivity. If you operate that way, you'll have little to show.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Regardless of peer pressure, avoid actions that don't serve your best interests. The only person you need to please is yourself.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Stand up for yourself and refuse to be intimidated by a few hot shots who think they have your number.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Keep your head out of the clouds and your mind on what helpful people are trying to tell you. If you don't, you'll regret your indifference.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Making an important decision while under pressure from others might not be the smartest way to go.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Don't take on more work than you can handle, and try to operate well within your area of expertise.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Usually, your assessment of new information is on target, but not so today. You're inclined to jump to conclusions and make some bad decisions.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Financial matters will tend to be a bit trickier than usual. Make sure you read the fine print.

Re: "Senators who opposed Sandy bill accept disaster aid" (Metro, May 23) This article highlights the typical lawmakers' disconnect from issues outside their backyard: looking out for [themselves], the heck with others. Oppose gun reform until a family member is killed; oppose health care until I need care that I can't afford; oppose disaster relief until my state is hit.

The Balto Syndrome

I call the situation of the terrorist Brothers Tsarnaev the "Balto Syndrome." Like the half-dog, half-wolf hero in the Steven Spielberg movie, the person doesn't know which one he is. Then some existential crisis or whatever occurs, and the person comes down too heavily on one side to make up for the years of inaction. John Wilkes Booth felt great guilt because he had never served in the trenches in his Confederate cause. So he lashed out and killed the very symbol of his grievance rather than deal with his inner demons.

Surprise ace takes mound for Phillies

MLB. Right-hander Kyle Kendrick gets the call in the team's series opener in Washington, D.C.

The Phillies enjoyed a much-deserved off-day Thursday. Well, most of them did as Chase Utley awaited MRI results.

The team is back in action Friday night in our nation's capital against the rival Nationals. The Phillies will throw out surprising star right-hander Kyle Kendrick in the opener of an important three-game set.

Kendrick has been a revelation this season, going 4-2 with a 2.82 ERA. He has 41 strikeouts against just 14 walks.

Kendrick, long known for his inconsistency, seems to have found his groove after seven seasons in Philadelphia. He was tied for the team lead in victories before Cliff Lee picked up his fifth win Wednesday night.

So what's been the biggest change?

"People have gotten on me about being inconsistent," Kendrick told reporters earlier this season. "I've had five good games and then three bad, so I'm trying to just be consistent every time out. Be me, be different."

Consistency — and adding a dangerous changeup as his secondary pitch.

"[Earlier in my career], I didn't want to throw it," Kendrick said. "Now I'll throw it [changeup] any count."

If Kendrick can provide another consistent outing for the Phils, they'll have a great shot at getting to the .500 mark, at 24-24. A win would tie them with the Nationals for second place in the NL East.

"I think we can beat them [Washington]," Lee said after Wednesday's win. "If we execute and do what we can do, we can beat anyone."

Extra bases

The Phillies made a minor roster move and provided an update on their newest pitcher on their off-day.

- Michael Stutes is back in the bullpen, some 13 months after recording his last out. The Phils recalled the reliever from the minors and optioned the struggling Phillippe Aumont.
- Carlos Zambrano threw an extended spring training game in Florida. He allowed one run (unearned) in four innings, while striking out four.
- The Phillies have partnered with the city's tourism board for the "Celebrate Tourism Event" on Tuesday. The Phanatic will dress in Colonial garb and march around Old City. Phillies tickets will be on sale to visitors at the Independence Visitor Center.

Depression
Research Study
Are you one of the millions of Americans suffering from depression?
You may qualify for a research study in your area evaluating a non-invasive investigational device for the treatment of depression. This is a non-medication study.
In order to qualify you must:
• Be between 22 and 65 years of age
• Have a diagnosis of Major Depressive Disorder (MDD)

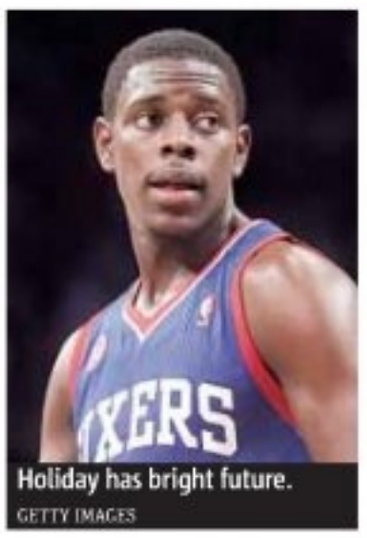
Sixers guard Holiday set to marry in July

NBA. The point guard has a busy offseason ahead — on and off the basketball court.

As the season wound down, Jrue Holiday took some time to reflect.

Holiday earned his first All-Star berth and assumed a leadership role. He elevated his game and literally carried the Sixers for much of the season. But he also watched his team struggle as center Andrew Bynum never was able to suit up.

Coach Doug Collins eventually resigned after his third season. Still, the ever-improving 22-year-old chose to look at the future in a positive way.



Holiday has bright future.

"I'm a humble person and I was raised that way," Holiday said recently. "I think it's important to be that way. I don't get cocky ever. Am I a confident player? Of course."

Holiday will be busy off the court, too. He will marry girlfriend, Lauren Cheney, a standout soccer player for the United States Women's National Team, in July.

"She's a great player, and I don't know how she does it with all that running and the training that goes into it," Holiday said. "It's going to be a great, great day and I'll get to enjoy it with my family and friends."
